

MAYOR'S MESSAGE

The summer season has finally arrived and not a minute to soon. For some it is time to relax and catch up on those books you meant to read during the winter and spring. And for the kids, well, I'm certain it's their favorite time of year not having to get up at the crack of dawn – at least for a while.

Possumtown Park has been completely renovated and was rededicated and reopened in June. So many of our residents enjoy at least one of our 26 parks or playgrounds on a regular basis and now Possumtown has become our newest state of the art park. Stop over and you'll see what I mean.

We are so fortunate in Piscataway to have, for the last 20 years, a team of specially trained volunteers dedicated to community service as members of the Piscataway Domestic Violence Crisis Intervention Team. It would be nice to think that we don't need such a group in our community but, in fact, over these 20 years, they have aided close to 1700 Township families in crisis. The team was formed in April 1995 under the direction of then Chief of Police Pasquale LaRocca and Captain Richard Gregory, and they answered their first call in July of that year.

The mission of the team is to provide solace, aid, referrals, comfort and education to families in times of crisis as well to increase public awareness about the cause, prevalence, interventions and prevention of Domestic Violence. Every situation is held in strictest confidence. Through the years the team has evolved and expanded the services they offer from crisis counseling to community education. They also sponsor the "Yellow Dress" production, an antiviolence dating program, for the Piscataway High School 10th grade class, and three years ago introduced "Remote Control" to the 7th and 8th grade classes in all three middle schools. Remote Control focuses on teaching preteens how to recognize and build healthy relationships. And in October of each year, there is a "Silent Witness" display in the Municipal Building of a silhouette representing a Piscataway resident murdered during an act of domestic violence. The team has also financed monetary scholarships for high school seniors who have persevered in difficult family situations.

The team is actively recruiting for new members – if you are interested, contact Lt. Frank Hackler at 732-562-2351 or email: fhackler@piscatawaynj.org.

POLICE CHIEF IVONE RETIRES

Piscataway Township bids a fond farewell to Police Chief Richard (Rick) Ivone, an officer who has served Piscataway residents for the last 35 years. He was far ahead of the current curve now prevailing across the country when, several years ago, he implemented a social media platform for the department to better connect with Township residents. During his tenure, he was responsible for many innovative changes in the department, including refocusing the department’s mission statement to become a more “community oriented” policing department. He also modernized the police uniform, including a new patch, expanded popular community policing programs such as Citizen’s Police Academy, Police Youth Week and National Night Out, and he implemented the department’s free NIXLE notification system. Rick implemented an on-line police reporting system and Piscataway, under his leadership, was the first police department in Middlesex County to equip its officers with tasers. Rick is a Rutgers University graduate and he and his wife have a son and daughter. The Piscataway community thanks Chief Ivone for his many years of service and wishes him the very best in the years ahead.

“Class 16” Citizen Police Academy Graduates, Mayor Brian C. Wahler, Councilman Jim Bullard, Police Chief Rick Ivone, Captain Scott Cartmell and other Community Policing Officers.

Congratulations to the most recent graduates of the Police Department’s acclaimed Citizen Police Academy. Eighteen residents graduated in May. Participants of “Class 16” attended the 12-week program in order to get a behind the scenes look at the multitude of police services it provides and to see exactly what their police department does on a day-to-day basis. For information on this program, call Lt. Frank Hackler at 732-562-2351.

COOPERATION: CLEANING UP THE SITES ONCE THOUGHT LOST

By Senator Bob Smith

Five years ago I introduced legislation that would help clean up our Garden State, a program that already had been successful in states like Massachusetts. Governor Corzine at the time signed the law in 2009 and established a Licenses Site Remediation Program that is helping to clean up contaminated sites that have been the blight of local communities.

When this law passed it allowed industry professionals to take over some of the weight off of the New Jersey's Department of Environmental Protection by giving the professionals the opportunity to take over the cleanup of those hazardous sites. As a result, these companies no longer require the DEP to approve the minutia that may come about over the course of a cleanup project. That being said, the DEP has laid out standards and oversees the success of these sites by requiring that the Licensed Site Remediation Professionals (LSRPs) develop a Remedial Action "Work Plan (RAWP) for the cleanup of the site. Furthermore, LSRPs must have extensive experience and put their licenses on the line whenever they take over a site. In addition, the law also provided for penalties in order to increase the accountability which include but are not limited to fines and/or criminal penalties.

In addition to the DEP's oversight, the law created a state Site Remediation Professional Licensing Board to certify the professionals and investigate any complaints brought against LSRPs. According to the Board's website, out of the audits of 144 professionals, and 17 complaints, only four had a result other than a complete withdrawal or dismissal of the complaint (www.nj.gov/lsrphoard/index.html).

In addition to the cleanups, a multitude of benefits have come out of this new flourishing industry in our state. To encourage the next generation to join the ranks of LSRPs the Licensed Site Remediation Professional Association (LSRPA), a nonprofit organization, has pledged a $10,000 scholarship to one or more students who have taken the initiative to study science or engineering related to environmental consulting, according to the association's website.

As of last October, there were 579 LSRPs licensed in the state and the number continues to grow. Furthermore, the number of pending contamination cases has dropped from some 20,000 in 2009, to 13,700 sites, according to the LSRPA. As the number of cases decrease, the opportunity for NJ companies to benefit the state increases. Over the short life span of this program New Jersey has seen over 5,000 sites get restored to an environmentally clean condition and come back on the inventory of available commercial property, creating new jobs in the process.
